POTTER VALLEY NOTES.

Interesting Events Which Have Occurred the Past Week.

POTTER VALLEY, November 22.—Prosperity again seems to be dawning for the busy farmers. They hail with rapture the long looked-for rain, and all nature as well is being refreshed by the gentle showers.

Mrs. Hick Thomas, who purchased the Montgomery property in Pomo, has moved the building, changed the structure, and will soon have a comfortable little home.

Miss Pearl Hopper, youngest daughter of William Hopper, while crossing the bridge at Centerville, was attacked by a ferocious dog of J. V. Ray's, which tore her cape and slightly bruised her arm. The dog was soon killed and the cape paid for.

Otis Landon, while working on Mr. Burrow's barn, had his collar bone broken by a falling rafter.

Eugene Holbrook has accepted a position in J. M. Robert's dry goods store, while Mr. Roberts goes to San Francisco to purchase his stock of dry goods.

A. Smith of Arbuckle and Lee Christopher and family of Williams came over Monday last to attend the last sad rites of their mother, Mrs. Nancy J. Smith.

Newton Howe, our genial friend formerly of this place, is visiting friends and relatives here.

A vaquero of Pierce, while driving stock over the bridge by Cleveland's mill, to his horror saw several calves fall through the bridge, and one was so badly crippled that it had to be killed. That doesn't speak very well for the county.

Richard Hughes and wife, who for the past few months have been in Tehama county, have returned, deciding to spend another winter here.

The great turkey case is now before us, yet pending, and the question yet to decide is to which place they belong. Rev. Dr. Hannon of the M. E. church South, who once held the pastorship in Ukiah, we are pleased to say is announced to deliver the Thanksgiving sermon Thursday evening at the Advent Christian church. LINDA POWELL.

SAM RICE'S GOOD LUCK.

He Negotiates the Sale of His Trinity County Copper Mine.

George Richardson, formerly of this city, but for the past two years an employe of a mining company at Angels Camp, has been unlucky. He was sent to this city a week or so ago by a well known mining syndicate to negotiate the purchase of the Rice copper mine in Trinity county. When he arrived here Mr. Rice had departed for San Francisco, and Mr. Richardson was unable to anticipate a deal that was immediately thereafter made by a New York syndicate. A special from Redding dated Friday last says:

A New York syndicate, represented by Sam H. Rice, a civil and mining engineer of Ukiah, has purchased 16,000 acres of land in Trinity county from the Merritt estate of Oakland. The first payment was made on the 15th inst., the purchase price being $250,000. There is a great deal more in this transfer than is apparent on the surface. The late W. P. Merritt and a man named Fenton originally bought the land for grazing purposes, and when a survey of the county line was being made, a deposit of copper bearing ore 1200 feet long by 70 feet wide was discovered on the property. Tests of the ore have returned values of from 9 to 18 per cent copper, $5 to $10 gold and $3 to $10 silver. This was the inducement which impelled the New York people to buy.

Development of the copper mine will be begun at once by putting to work a large force of men. The acreage lies in the southwestern portion of Trinity county in the Horseshoe bend of Eel river, twenty-five miles from the line of the proposed Ukiah and Eureka railroad.

Fourteen hundred head of cattle were included in the sale. The property is assessed in Trinity county for $50,000.

The Performance Last Night.

The rendition of Shakespeare's romantic drama, Much Ado About Nothing, by the senior class of the local high school last evening was decidedly creditable. The performers had been well drilled by Mrs. T. J. Weldon, and their parts were well sustained. It was the first time that any of the masterpieces of the bard of Avon had been produced on the local boards, and the manner in which it was performed is deserving of great praise. There were those little hitches and lapses incident to the amateur, but on the whole there was nothing occurred to mar the beauty or continuity of the play. Following was the cast:

Don Pedro, prince of Arragon.....S. A. Barrett
Don John, his brother.....A. S. Henley
Count Claudio, friend of Don Pedro... P. W. Polk
Benedick, friend of Don Pedro .....D. Orsborn
Leonato, governor of Messina.....R. Lowe
Borachio, follower of Don John.....R. Thomas
Dogberry, watcher..... R. B. Moore
Verges, officer.....E. G. Williams
Messenger.....H. Wyckoff
Friar Francis.....F. M. Hoag
Hero, daughter of Leonato.....Miss G. Lamb
Beatrice, niece of Leonato.....Miss A. Elliott
Ursula, maid attending Hero... Miss M. Smith

The difficult role of Beatrice was charmingly rendered by Miss Abbie Elliott, whose petite and graceful figure and well modulated voice were admirably suited to Shakespeare's wilful heroine. Dannie Orsborn played the part of Benedick in a thoroughly creditable manner. The part of Don Pedro was taken by S. A. Barrett, and he did it well. Count Claudio did not suffer at the hands of Mr. Polk, and the part of Hero won for Miss Geneva Lamb well merited applause. Madge Smith was a charming Ursula. The other members of the cast sustained their characters exceedingly well, and the evening with Shakespeare was an enjoyable one. The students of the high school may well feel proud of their success.

The Association Wins.

Judge Dougherty of Santa Rosa has handed down a decision in the case of the People's Building and Loan association of Fort Bragg vs Julius Wintzer and Solomon Marks. The action was brought for a $5000 note and to foreclose a mortgage on the Hotel Windsor of Fort Bragg. The judge held that the plaintiff could maintain an action to foreclose its mortgage for nonpayment of insurance premium. The defendanss claimed that inasmuch as nonpayment was not one of the grounds specifically mentioned in the building and loan law, upon which the action to foreclose could be brought, the plaintiff could not recover.

Christmas Goods.

This is the holiday season and in a short time Christmas will be here. In making a Christmas present one wishes to give something that is up to date as well as useful or ornamental, and it is usually very hard to determine what to purchase. Jewelry and silverware, etc., are the most acceptable gifts. In this line E. Joseph's stock will suit the most fastidious, as he is constantly receiving new goods. If you will call at his store you cannot fail to find a suitable present. His new store is just west of the court house.

For Vagrancy.

J. W. Breen was arrested by Constable Harbert Monday last and charged with being a vagrant. Breen seemed unable to deny the impeachment, and was consequently sentenced to pass the ensuing fifteen days in durance. This seemed to suit the culprit, as the appearance of the weather was tempestuous. The vagrant is now snugly ensconced.

Dr. Orlan Kirk of Fort Bragg spent the past week in this city, where he made many friends.

THE FIRE AT DAWSON

PHILO HANDY DESCRIBES THE CONFLAGRATION.

He Says That the Opportunity for Making Money in Alaska is Good—Will Remain on the Klondike During the Coming Winter.

DAWSON CITY, October 29.—I wrote you a few days ago, but as the post office was burned in the late fire, I fear my letters went up in smoke, and as I have an opportunity to send out by R. Martin, a friend of mine who lives in Alameda county, will just write you a few lines.

Friday last when the thermometer was 10 degrees below zero, and about 5 o'clock in the morning, a fire broke out in the Green Tree hotel, which for some hours threatened the complete destruction of the two principal streets of Dawson. The fire rapidly spread north and south on these streets, but a wind soon sprang up, coming down the river from the south, which made it possible to stop the fire in that direction, but this only increased the speed of the flames north toward the more valuable portion of the city, including the great warehouses where lies stored the supplies with which to feed the hungry miners for the next twelve months, and should these burn, not only would many mines be shut down for the winter, but thousands of men would have to go out on the ice to points where they could procure food supplies.

On came the mad flames, leaping from building to building, being wildly fought by an unorganized mob of two or three thousand men. The great log structures, standing in their rustic beauty, embellished by the skill of the architect and the artisan; the fine frame buildings, most of them having been constructed this summer and fall and many of them just finished and yet unoccupied, as well as the more temporary buildings, melting before the intense heat, like snow before a hot noonday sun, until they reached a point just one block distant from the great store and warehouses of the A. C. & Co., when the wind providentially shifted to the north, and the forces having become better organized, a bucket-line brigade was formed, and the progress of the fire was arrested, and Dawson City, icebound and snowclad, although somewhat blackened and charred, still lives.

One hour later, a magnificent fire engine came steaming down the street, too late for this fire, but ready for the next, should one unfortunately occur. Dawson City now has a fine new fire engine, pumps, hose, hook and ladder company, blocks and tackles, etc., and everything necessary to equip a firstclass fire company, but all these were carelessly allowed to remain boxed up, until necessity compelled their being hastily put together.

When I first arrived in Dawson, owing to the highly inflated condition of the country, the labor and hardships to undergo, and the climatic obstacles to overcome in prospecting the country, I formed a somewhat unfavorable opinion of its future, but after becoming better acquainted, and with some study of its resources, I am satisfied that the possibilities of this country, and the opportunities to make money, if one gets off lucky, are greater than any other place on earth. Two-hundred-and-fifty-foot claims are often sold from $10,000 to $150,000, prices which were never before known for placer mines, as far as my knowledge goes.

The first snow of the season came on the 17th of September and two weeks later the second fall came. Like the rains here the snowfall comes light and drizzling. A warm Chinook wind prevails today, which promises to take the snow all off, and open the river again, which for the past ten days has been running pretty full of ice.

As to our prospects here, it looks as though we are going to make some money, but it is not possible to know how much. I shall not come out this fall, as I have a good position and cannot take the time to come out and go back, to say nothing of the labor involved in making the round trip on the ice during the winter. I may send Lee Taylor out after supplies. We get the San Francisco papers here, and would like to get the Ukiah papers. P. HANDY

NOTES FROM THE PHILIPPINES.

Items of Interest from from the Distant Islands.

The United States Navy will soon possess more than a sprinkling of foreign-built war ships. Admiral Dewey has informed the Navy Department that he has contracted with a Hongkong firm of wreckers to raise three of the Spanish war vessels sunk in the battle of Manilla last May day. The cost of raising the ships and putting them in thorough repair will be about $500,000.

There was a fight in Manila Saturday night in which an American soldier and an insurgent were killed. Three Filipino natives hired a carriage and afterward became engaged in a dispute with the driver regarding the fare. Some members of the American police attempted to arrest the natives, but the latter resisted and Sargeant Price of the Minnesota regiment was stabbed and killed, and three other American soldiers, Maher, Montgomery, and Hoyt were wounded. Maher shot one native dead. The others were arrested.

The cruiser Charleston and the Concord have been sent to Iloilo owing to reports received by Admiral Dewey that the city had been captured by the insurgents. Iloilo is the capital of the island of Panay and there are a number of Europeans doing business there. It is to protect these from the insurgents that the warships were sent. While it is impossible to learn whether the report of the capture of the town is correct, it is generally believed that it is, as at last reports the place was besieged by the rebel forces and all the the outposts had been driven in.

On account of advices lately received from Otis at Manila, and because of the expectation of the administration that the United States will have occasion to establish garrisons throughout the Philippine islands within a short time, it has been decided that no diminution of the present military forces in the orient can be allowed at present. There is a tendency, on the contrary, to believe that the army in the Philippines should be increased in the near future. The war department is now actively preparing to send an extraordinarily large supply of arms, ammunition and general military supplies to Manila within a short time. It was learned that this expedition would consist of the largest shipment of munitions of war that has been made to any territory since the Spanish war begun. The officials of the war department are very reticent on the subject and they refuse absolutely to assign any cause for the government's action. It is plainly evident from the preparations now being made that the government's purpose is to prepare for defending the islands not only against Spain, should hostilities with that country be resumed, but against any interference which may possibly arise from any other government.

News of a mixed character came to the Navy Department last week from Admiral Dewey touching the situation in the Philippines. The Admiral sent two of his warships, the Charleston and Concord, some time ago, to the southward from Manilla to ascertain whether there was truth in the report that the Spanish had expanded their action in that direction. The following message was received Friday:

"MANILA, November 18.—Secretary of the Navy, Washington: Charleston and Concord arrived to-day from Iloilo. They report that the entire islands are in possession of the insurgents, except Iloilo, which is defended by the Spanish troops. All foreign citizens there are for American protection. The island of Negros has declared independence and desires an American protectorate. DEWEY."

Admiral Dewey, in a letter to a Vermont friend said: "I trust the entire archipelago will be retained by the United States. Any other arrangement will lead to no end of trouble."

Wreck on the Oregon Coast.

The iron ship Atalanta, Captain McBride, bound from Tacoma to Delago bay, South Africa, was wrecked off the Oregon coast Thursday, and of a crew of 27 men only three were saved.

The wreck of the Atalanta and the circumstances attending it produce a tale most harrowing. To the management of the vessel, and the fact that she was racing with two other vessels under a wager is ascribed the cause of the disaster. The helplessness of the Yaquima life-saving station, owing to the penurious policy pursued with that department of the government, adds to the horror of the situation. While the members of the life saving crew were in sight of the wreck they were powerless to render assistance owing to lack of horses to haul the apparatus.

One of the survivors of the wreck in speaking of the disaster said, "The officers of the Atalanta paid the penalty of their policy with their lives, not one has escaped. The wreck it more the result of carelessness on the the part of the captain than to adverse weather. The Atalanta was racing down the coast with another sailing ship to make better time and to have a more advantageous tack against the southwester. The captain steered close into Cape Fairweather, and not seeing the lighthouse, he supposed the vessel to be some distance from the shore. This caused him to continue his southeast tack to long."

GUARDING THE MINT.

HOW THE PHILADELPHIA INSTITUTION IS PROTECTED.

Little Chance For Any One to Get Rich Quickly by Helping Himself to Uncle Sam's Treasure—Patrols, Revolvers and Winchesters In Plenty.

Probably not one person out of a hundred who pass by the Philadelphia mint, that grim looking edifice at Chestnut and Juniper streets, after nightfall realizes what is going on inside. There is nothing mean about Uncle Sam, but he is determined that any one who gets his money shall get it honestly and by process duly laid down. Therefore he has taken all kinds of precautions to properly protect, especially at night, the millions upon millions piled up in the vaults.

The doors of the mint are closed every weekday promptly at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. After that hour no one out mint employees have any business within the walls which inclose so much money, and no one can either stay in or get in without a special permit from the superintendent. Needless to say, this is difficult to obtain.

Simultaneously with the closing of the doors at 4 o'clock the first shift of the night guard goes on duty. The shift is composed of the captain of the guard and 11 stalwart men. As the men file out to begin their round each one is handed a big Colt's revolver of the most approved pattern and loaded with big cartridges.

From then on till midnight seven of the 11 guards patrol without cessation every floor of the inside of the mint, from the corridors of the gloomy vaults where, away down in the earth, are stowed eighty odd million dollars in silver and almost as much gold, to the top floor, where there is nothing more valuable than machinery. Placed at frequent intervals throughout the corridors are electrical devices for enabling the captain of the guard to keep tabs on his men. Each of these little machines communicates with the rotunda opposite the Chestnut street entrance to the mint. Here it is that the captain is stationed all through the long hours of his shift. Every two minutes and a half the central machine in the rotunda denotes the presence of some one of the guard at some particular station in the building. If it doesn't, then the captain knows that something is wrong, and he immediately proceeds to discover what it is.

But it has been a long time since the little machine failed to send forth its announcement at the proper time, for the mint guards are patrolling up and down outside the big building, carefully watching that no suspicious characters approach too near the vast treasure left in their care.

Promptly at midnight the second shift of the night guard puts in an appearance to relieve the early shift. It is also composed of a captain and 11 men, and they are split up, as the other squad, into inside and outside details. From midnight on until 7 o'clock in the morning they follow in the footsteps of the first shift, with every faculty alert to catch an intruder.

The big revolvers are not the only weapons upon which the guards have to rely. On each side of the main corridor leading from the Chestnut street entrance stands a walnut case. Through the polished glass front of one frown 20 Winchester rifles. The other contains as many ugly looking carbines. To grab these dispensers of death would be but the work of an instant for the guards, and then woe be unto any man or men upon whom it might be found necessary to turn them.

For the revolvers there is kept constantly on hand in the mint 500 rounds of ammunition, and for the rifles and carbines 2,500 rounds. Each of the guards is an expert in the use of both the pistol and the gun, and each is endowed with a plentiful stock of courage; hence a combination capable of successfully resisting almost anything less than a regiment.

The superintendent and assistant custodian both talked to the reporter about the methods in use to protect the mint and its contents. Both smiled significantly when the possibility of one getting away with a portion of the vast treasure was suggested.

"It would be folly for any one to try it," was the superintendent's only comment. To it the assistant custodian nodded emphatic assent.

"I have been here for a good many years," the latter said, "and no such attempt has ever been made. It is practically impossible for any one to break into the mint from the outside, and no one could secrete himself in the building during the hours when it is open to visitors and hope to avoid discovery. We search every nook and corner of the structure carefully as soon as the doors are closed for the day, and you may rest assured if any one who had no business within these walls was found he would regret the day he was born."

In addition to the two shifts of night guards, the superintendent and assistant custodian have a habit of dropping in at the mint at odd hours of the night to see that everything is going on all right.

The mint is connected with the central telephone station, and should there be trouble the captain of the guard could communicate with police headquarters in a brief space of time.

"If you come across anybody who thinks he can get rich quickly by helping himself to our coin," remarked the superintendent in parting, "just advise him to think it over carefully first."

In compliance with the superintendent's suggestion the advice is hereby given.

And it is pretty good advice to follow too.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

According to the novels of Richardson and his contemporaries, in the olden days men used to admire women who screamed upon the least provocation and fainted on all opportunities. Richardson's heroines were always toppling out of their chairs, falling in a "dead faint" in their lovers' arms, having their stays cut and their hands slapped, their temples bathed and their noses smelling-salted.

Both the women and the men have changed radically since those days. The modern man does not admire the fainting woman, neither does he marry her. If by chance he does, he is only a man, and lives to regret it. There is no reason why any woman should be a fainting woman. General bodily weakness and nervousness in women are due to weakness or disease of the delicate, special organs of the sex. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific and unfailing remedy for all disorders of this description. It imparts health and strength to the sensitive and susceptible organs upon which a woman's general health is largely dependent. It quiets and tones up the nerves, restores the vigor of youth, rounds out the emaciated form, imparts the glow of health to the complexion and transforms weak, sickly, nervous invalids into new, healthy, happy women. It fits for wifehood and motherhood.

"Words fail to describe my suffering before using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. Sallie Key, of Tampico, Granger Co., Tenn. "I had inflammation, irritation and profuse flowing and was very nervous and suffered terribly at all times. My feet and limbs were cold. I had palpitation of the heart, and my back was so weak that I could not turn myself in bed. The thought of food sickened me. My kidneys were very badly affected. I had been down six months. I could not sleep night or day and had given up all hope. My husband got me some of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I took it for five months and at the end of that time could walk a mile and do all my own housework. I am sure I would be in my grave if it had not been for the 'Favorite Prescription.'"

His Umbrella.

The other evening a man was rushing through the streets of London hurrying to an appointment when a swell passed in front of him who held his umbrella at a dangerous angle. The hasty pedestrian pulled the umbrella away from the swell, and then, stepping around to him, said in suavest tone: "Oh, by the way, here's your umbrella. I found it in my eye."—Pick Me Up.

Ruse to Win a King's Love.

When Wilhelmina, who is soon to be crowned queen of the Netherlands, was a child, her father often refused to see her for days at a time. This dislike of the innocent baby, which she repaid with a passionate devotion, was the result of her being a daughter instead of a son.

Wilhelmina's mother, Queen Emma, grieved constantly over this unjust resentment, and she finally planned a ruse to win King William's favor for his baby girl. The king was very fond of flowers, and a bouquet of the choicest blossoms always adorned his breakfast table. One morning at the matutinal meal, as he bent over to inhale a great bank of roses which filled the center of the table, a baby face peeped at him from its midst and two soft arms crept round his neck, while a tiny voice exclaimed, "Oh, papa, take me out of the flowers, they prick me so." And the king, so runs the story, took her in his arms and loved her ever after.

Not Disposed to Delay Him.

"I would go to the end of the world for you," he exclaimed passionately.

"I'm sure I wish you would," she answered coldly, "and—then jump off."—Somerville Journal.

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.

No Wonder the Editor Was Stunned With Surprise.

The country journalist, having concluded his work of devil, printer, bookkeeper, job printer, reporter, editor, press hand, mailing clerk, collector, compositor and ad solicitor for the day, had sat down to study out what string to pull to get enough money to meet a note of $14.38 coming due next Saturday, when a man he did not know came into the office and sat down without being asked to do so. For a minute he looked around the place and at the presiding spirit of it before he spoke.

"You are," he said slowly, "the proprietor of this establishment, and it is a newspaper office"?

"It is," replied the wondering editor.

"And this is your product"? he said, holding up that week's issue. "A newspaper"?

"Yes."

"The herald of a noisy world"? said the visitor dreamily.

"Yes."

"The million-folded multiple of thought"?

"Yes."

"The hasty record of the world's affairs"?

"Yes."

"The molder of public opinion"?

"Yes," said the journalist, looking worried.

"Man's daily doings done in ink"?

"Yes."

"The richest treasure of the art preservative of arts"?

"Yes."

"The Archimedean lever that moves the universe"?

"Yes," and by this time the editor was getting ready to escape by the window.

"And all for two and a half a year," said the visitor, still in that dreamy tone, as he let his soft blue eye fall over the page. "It's a durn shame," he went on, going down into his pocket, "here's $5, and I'll send you in a cord of wood and a bushel of apples and four gallons of cider next week." Then he got up and went out without so much as saying "goodbye," and the editor gazed stupidly at the $5 bill on his knee.

THE YOUNGEST SOLDIER.

Death of George Marshall, a Wellknown Coaster.

Word was received here Friday of the death of George Marshall, which occurred in San Francisco on the morning of that day. Mr. Marshall had been a sufferer from stomach troubles for several years past. He visited San Francisco several times in search of medical aid, and several months ago he returned from a trip to that place somewhat improved in health. He continued to grow better for a time, but had a relapse and was again obliged to return to San Francisco, where he underwent a surgical operation. This was performed several days ago and was an apparent success. His long illness, however, had greatly reduced his recuperative powers, and on Friday morning he passed quietly away, says The Beacon.

Mr. Marshall was well and favorably known all along the coast, having been a resident of Mendocino county since 1876. Until sickness overtook him, he followed the vocation of a sawyer, and was noted for the good quality of lumber he manufactured. Mr. Marshall bore the distinction of being the youngest soldier in the Union army during the rebellion, having enlisted in that organization when he was twelve years old as a drummer boy. He was honorably discharged in 1865, after three years of service. In 1866 he again enlisted in the army and was sent to California, where he did frontier duty for the next succeeding three years, at the expiration of which time he was again honorably discharged, after six years of faithful service to his country. At the time of his death Mr. Marshall was a member of Missionary Post, No. 158, of Fort Bragg, and also of the Workmen's lodge of this place. He leaves a wife and three sons to mourn his death.

What Shall We Do.

A serious and dangerous disease prevails in this country, dangerous because so deceptive. It comes on so slowly yet surely that it is often firmly seated before we are aware of it. The name of this disease which may be divided into three distinct stages is, First, kidney trouble, indicated by pain in the back, rheumatism, lumbago, frequent desire to urinate, often with a burning sensation, the flow of urine being copious or scant with strong odor. If allowed to advance, this reaches the second stage, or bladder trouble, with heavy pain in the abdomen low down between the navel and the water passage, increasing desire to urinate, with scalding sensation in passing, small quantities being passed with difficulty, sometimes necessary to draw it with instruments. If uric acid or gravel has formed, it will prove dangerous if neglected. The third stage is bright's disease. There is comfort in knowing that Dr. Kilmer, the great kidney and bladder specialist, has discovered a remedy famous for its marvelous cures of the most distressing cases and known as Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. It is sold by all druggists. As a proof of the wonderful virtues of this great discovery, Swamp-Root, a sample bottle and book of valuable information will be sent absolutely free by mail on application to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing kindly mention that you read this liberal offer in the REPUBLICAN-PRESS.

Thanksgiving Turkey.

Mrs. E. D. Lamb of Willits sued Silas Travers of the same place for the recovery of a band of turkeys and damages. The case was a celebrated one in the annals of Little Lake jurisprudence, and the jury was out all day. J. E. Pemberton represented the plaintiff, while John McNab appeared for the defendant. The defendant got a little the better of the case, the jury hanging 5 to 3 in his favor.

Saratoga Destroyed.

The Saratoga hotel was burned to the ground Wednesday morning. Mr. Martin, the proprietor, had gone to the barn about 6 o'clock, and on his return he discovered the roof of the building to be on fire. But few articles were saved. The hotel was an expensive one, having cost originally about $10,000. The amount of insurance was not learned.

Cretaceous Sea Serpents.

In the latter part of the mesozoic age there was a great inland ocean, spreading over a large part of the present continent. The lands then above water were covered with a flora peculiar to the times and were inhabited by some of the animals which later distinguished the cenozoic age. In the seas were reptiles, fishes and turtles of gigantic proportions, armed for offense or defense. There were also oysterlike bivalves, with enormous shells, three or four feet in diameter, the meat of which would have fed many people.

In time this great ocean, swarming with vigorous life, disappeared. Mountain ranges and plains gradually arose, casting forth the waters and leaving the monsters to die and bleach in tertiary suns. As the waters remaining divided into smaller tracts they gradually lost their saline stability. The stronger monsters gorged on the weaker tribes until they, too, stranded on rising sand bars or lost vitality and perished as the waters freshened. In imagination we can picture the strongest, bereft of their food supply at last and floundering in the shallow pools until all remaining mired or starved. It would be interesting to know how much of the great cretaceous ocean forms a part if any of the vast oceans of today.—Popular Science.

Surgery on Snakes.

Snakes in captivity, it seems, sometimes find difficulty in getting rid of the skin which is shed every year, and an Australian diamond snake in the Bombay museum appeared likely to succumb. It was quite blind and refused all food.

A European sympathizer therefore pressed the native snake keeper into service to hold the snake, and himself with a pair of sharp pointed scissors performed the delicate and risky operation of clipping away the membrane which adhered to the eyes.

J. M. Phipson, editor of The Journal of the Bombay Natural History society, performed a far more dangerous operation a couple of years ago. His patient was a large hamadryad, or king cobra, the most vicious and poisonous of all Indian snakes, and a most powerful creature to boot. Mr. Phipson gripped the king cobra round the neck, and a native literally held on for his life further down, and when the reptile's struggles were over a third man, armed with a surgeon's scalpel, removed eight layers of membrane from each eye.—Sketch.

Spain's Popular Beverage.

"Horchata de chufa," is the singular name of the most popular drink in Madrid. This is made from a nut called "chufa," yielding a milky liquid when reduced to a pulp. This is diluted with water, and forms a most cooling and refreshing drink. However, it is an acquired taste. Very few like it at the first trial. The horchata may be made from different kinds of nuts. The almond is used also.

Strange to relate, the horchata de chufa is always sold where matting is kept for sale, so that when you spy a roll of the latter outside the store door, it is a sufficient indication that in that particular place you may procure a glass of the horchata. In spite of inquiries, I was unable to discover the origin of the singular combination of articles on sale.—Truth.

Miss Balfour.

Miss Balfour, who acts as hostess at her brother's many political parties, is not the least brilliant member of her remarkable family. Like her sisters, Mrs. Sidgwick and Lady Rayleigh, she is deeply interested in all the problems of modern life, and, though chance has made her necessarily play a considerable role in the Conservative party, she has never been a particularly active member of any political association, and she is undoubtedly more interested in her brother's philosophical labors than in the great position he has won for himself as leader of the Tory party in the house of commons. Miss Balfour herself wields a very clever pen, as was shown in amusing accounts of her sojourn in South Africa, and of her adventures nearer home when acting as her brother's alter ego in some of the wilder districts of Ireland. Lord Salisbury considered her more like his sister, the late Lady Blanche Balfour, than any of his other nieces. She is a charming and unassuming hostess and possesses the gift of making even the least known of her guests thoroughly at home and at ease. Mr. Cecil Rhodes, who is credited with being something of a misogynist, has a great admiration for Miss Balfour. He did everything in his power to make her visit in South Africa a pleasant one, and since he has been in England he has been several times her guest in Downing street.—Ladies' Field.

A New Danger.

Public schoolteachers must be on the lookout for "gumbacco," which is a combination of chewing tobacco and gum, and which is now sold in many candy and tobacco stores. A Chicago teacher discovered that it was largely used by the pupils, and she found it was sold in the nearby stores. She warned the proprietors that they would be prosecuted under the anticigarette law if they sold it any more.—Woman's Tribune.

A space is to be set aside in the Congressional library for literature of the woman suffrage movement, and Miss Anthony will be invited to place there her letters, papers, etc., to be kept intact and known as the Susan B. Anthony collection.

Memorial services have been held for Miss Willard almost the world over. The Union Signal in its last issue gives correspondence from South Africa and Australia describing services which were held at many places on the 20th of March.

An expert advises that a few drops of camphor in the water in which the face is bathed in warm weather will do much to remove the shiny appearance of the skin which is apt to be an accompaniment of a hot day.

Among the pretty curtains for doorways in the summer are the Indian cotton prints in wool effects. These have palm leaf patterns, and at a little distance take on the appearance of a fine cashmere shawl.

The latest Paris belts are studded with oxidized nails, and they are said to be beautifully odd. The newest American styles are decorated with flags and military emblems.

Miss Hannah Kindbom, a bright young woman of Swedish birth, has just been installed as professor of nursing in the University of Texas.

Chas. Lambrecht of Suisun, was recently found dead near a roadside where he had been hunting ducks. How he met his death is not known.

J. A. Filcher of the California state board of trade has a letter from the managers of the Commercial museum, Lisle, France, offering free space and free care of any non-perishable products of California. The idea is to make a perpetual exhibit in that city of every unperishable article that can be produced in California.

Direct communication between South American markets and San Francisco will soon be established by a large French steamship company. The Chargeurs Reunis will start a monthly service next March between San Francisco and Livorpool, which will make stoppages at Mazatlan, Acapulco, Guayaquil, Callao, Peru; Valpariso, Chili; Montevideo, Uruguay; Santos, Brazil; Liverpool, Harve, and possibly a Belgian port. The company has been organized and operated since 1872, and is now having constructed three 6000-ton additional steamers for the Pacific trade.

Next week the water will for the first time be turned into flumes and tunnels of the Southern California Power company in the Santa Ana canyon, Cal. The plant has been two years in building, and has cost $500,000. There are three and one-half miles of tunnels through solid granite mountains, and two miles of fluming.

Isadare Schopps, a tailor, shot and killed Gustav Hager, a shoemaker, in a house at Seattle, Wash. Schopps refuses to state the cause of the deed. Both men formerly lived in California.
